I. The National Tsing Hua University Computer and Communication Center's (hereinafter the "Center") G Suite Service (hereinafter the "Service") offers G Suite (Google Apps) for Education for the use of the University's staff, faculty, students, and alumni (at school: Education Plus version, leaving school: Education Fundamentals version). This Terms of Service was created to state the rights and responsibilities of the user.

II. Members of the University who identify as any of the following may apply for the Service online through the Academic Information System. This is the only method of application available.

(I) Faculty and staff whose job status is normal, who may apply for the Service (as determined by the Office of Personnel). Each Personnel Number may be connected to at most one account. When one leave school, the status will become un-normal and the access rights for Google Workspace for Education will turn down to Education Fundamentals available for long-term use for alumnis.

(II) Students whose academic status is normal, re-enrolled may apply for the Service (as determined by the Division of Registration, Office of Academic Affairs). Each Student Number may be connected to at most one account. When one leave school, the status will become un-normal and the access rights for Google Workspace for Education will turn down to Education Fundamentals available for long-term use for alumnis.

(III) The school faculty , staff ,and students can apply the account for the department/club mailbox through fillin in the email application form. The access rights for Google Workspace for Education will be judged by the applicant. So if the initial applicant resigns or leaves the school, another should change the mailbox manager immediately to avoid the access rights changing.

III. The account name can be chosen by the user. Once the application is approved, the Center will accept no further changes to the account name. The Center reserves the right to review the account name and asks the user to change it.

IV. Aside from the account name and applicant name provided to Google for account application, personal information provided by the applicant when applying for the service will be used only by the University's administrative unit for official use. It will not be transferred to a third party. After an account is created, unless otherwise stipulated by law, The management at the Center will not access or hand over any data that is uploaded (such as data stored in the cloud and personal e-mail) without your consent.

V. The Service is built under G Suite for Education. All users must accept Google Inc.'s G Suite for Education Agreement and Terms of Service. In the event of violation thereof, the Center and Google have the right to suspend or cancel the privileges of the account.
